MORE ABOUT PATTERSON.

The Review's Account Generally Accepted as True.

The first and only authentic news of M. G. Patterson since his disappearance and published yesterday morning was the subject of general conversation about the city throughout the day and far into the night. A majority of the people believed the story, and such remarks as "that is about the size of it," "That fellow is right even if it is a little drastic," and others of a like character were heard on all sides. Some people however without any grounds at all for belief were very much inclined to discredit the story altogether, and this is sad. They don't know how he managed to make so many long journeys after he was killed and robbed. Their ignorance is really lamentable. The robbers might easily have overlooked some of his pockets, and if they were standing over him when he fell they probably did overlook them, and not thinking that Mr. Patterson might have some money in his inside pocket, they did not investigate as thoroughly as they might have done. Then, too, you must remember that the robbers were anxious to get away. They feared detection. They didn't fear the architect who he was stout and rugged and alive with courage, but their nether limbs knocked the knee caps off of each other with fear after they saw that his spirit might take a notion to walk out from the prostrate body and enter them in a manner not at all to their liking? And why shouldn't they hurry away from such a shocking meeting as that? This explanation is certainly most reasonable. It may be suggested that there is altogether too much incredulity floating around this town anyway about the matter. Full faith in the Patterson story demands that this should not be so. You must remember that Mr. Patterson himself does not say absolutely that he was murdered. He does not know that. He only knows he lost consciousness, and money and commenced wearing a hole in his head about the same time. Of course this hole in his head may have been inflicted then or it might be acquired in the distant future. The Review hasn't seen Mr. Patterson but the Knight Errant who imparted all the information in the case to the reporter says that he knows the effect of the wound is still visible to the naked eye on his head and the hole in his head is also doing business at the old stand. Some thick-headed people, too, cannot understand how Mr. Patterson could be in Chicago about a week ago, go from there to Salt Lake, a journey of two or three days, be seen frequently with Ed Strohm since then, and how the news could be brought back here in a letter, which would require a couple of days more and arrive "about a week." Such incredulity as this is enough to make a fellow's teeth saw wood or chew Saratoga chips, and really "patience ceases to be a virtue" with such people.

REVIEW POST OFFICE.

Mr. Editor--Please tell me in your next issue who is the tariff plank of the republicans of 1888 is. Your correspondent in search of information applied to Maj. Mosser of the Republicans, but his memory was conveniently bad; couldn't recollect. Thinking your memory might serve you better I apply to you.

J. W. M.

The plank was made as a bridge across the chasm yawning between the republicans and the lords of office. The plank proved very rotten however, broke and let a great many of "them into the flesh-disturbing waters of "Salt Creek." Those who have not been engulfed already, will next fall, when they attempt to jump over the chasm, and it is pretty safe to assert that they will be salted down for keeps.

Mr. Editor--Is it proper for a young lady to kiss a married man twice as old as herself?

MAGDALENA.

It may not be improper; circumstances and relationship would have a great deal to do with deciding that point; but say, Magdalena, don't you think it would be shocking had taste to do that when there is a kissable young man, much nearer your own age, who is falling over himself in his eagerness to permit you to taste of his rare and piquant? Too much modesty is the trouble with the Review staff anyway and that young man's identity must remain unknown.

A Family of Paupers.

There is in this city a family that give the sociologist the material for considerable thought. Thirty years ago the family came to Decatur. The father was a farmer and mother and five or six children, all about grown. None of them would work, and almost as soon as they acquired a residence they began to get aid from the county. During the summer when it was almost impossible to get away from a little work, the male members of the family would do something, but for the most part they contented themselves with begging and living off their neighbors with the least possible effort. The women were shiftless and slothful, and put in their time running around after cold victuals and cast off clothing. That has been the history of the family ever since their residence in Decatur.

The only thing these people give themselves to with assiduity and industry is found in the two directions they are eminently successful, and as a result they are bringing up two or three generations of paupers. The officers of the Charity union and of Macon county who have charge of such matters are confident that half the paupers in the city are in this family. They are not all of the same name now, but the old stock and its characteristics are there. Nine different families of the line were on the books of the Charity union last winter. Only two still have the family name, but the others have the disease, laziness and shiftlessness, as best as any. Hundreds of the families of most of them have nine, and some have eleven. All these children are growing up in a squalor and wretchedness, with the one idea that they must get a living without working for it. So far they have been doing it, after a miserable fashion. The bad effect on the community can hardly be calculated, but how a remedy is to be applied it is difficult to tell.

Committed Suicide.

Saturday morning, Miss Bettie Ward, living near Todd's Point, got up about 5 o'clock and committed suicide by jumping into a well which was only seven feet deep and in it five feet of water. She was 27 years old, and was the wife of Harry Ward, Cornelius Morris, John Ward, Frank and Riley Ward. She formerly lived in Wheatland township. Several years ago after a long illness she tried to commit suicide with a razor, but was prevented that time from doing so.

The funeral will be held at 11 o'clock today at Walnut Grove, three miles southwest of Decatur. The Rev. W. L. Bankson will conduct the service.

STRAY SCRAPS.

There is positively no need of abandoning all hope of a natural ice crop, get this winner.

The Terre Haute spring race meeting will open on June 2d, with Axtell and Sunol both on the track. The T. H. & P. will run an excursion.

G. E. Henderson has concluded that his business at the East End gallery demands all his attention, and therefore he will not manage the Piper gallery.

The Bostonian calls it a "dood," the Irishman calls it a "jude," the German refers to it as a "yude," and the average citizen merely alludes to it as a "d-i-d." Besides the cold weather and coal famine and sore throats and political disappointment and organ-grinders, the citizens just now are also suffering from the attacks of assessors on their surplus.

The state central committee will hold a meeting at the Palmer house, Chicago, at 10 o'clock a. m. on the 10th of this month for the purpose of electing a chairman and filling a vacancy.

The soliciting committee of the shoe factory fund will begin calling on the subscribers next week. It is hoped that they will pay up promptly, as the money will be needed to pay the bills on the building, work on which is to be pushed rapidly.

Yesterday a gentleman left this city for the west. He will be in Salt Lake early in the week, and in the interest of the Review and for the benefit of those interested will unearthen all the facts concerning Patterson as they now are.

The information given by a fashionable paper that "gentlemen's dress remains the same this year" is no news at all to a great many fellows, whose dress remains the same this year, with the exception of a few additional patches, that it was three years ago.

The people on North Water street have sent word up town that they want a policeman out there to keep the crowd still that surrounds the swing at night. It is made up of a choice collection of the toughs of both sexes, and while they are there respectable people want to get away.

Melissa Dally, of Peasoville, swore out a warrant yesterday for the arrest of Mrs. Richard Cook, also of that classic and aromatic neighborhood, because the latter used some very naughty language in addressing the former. Officer Brockway served the warrant, and Mrs. Cook will be asked to tell Justice Provost how it all happened to-morrow.

To day is "rally day" at the A. M. E. church and collections will be taken up at three of our meetings. The object is to secure sufficient money to pay off the church debt. Rev. C. H. Sheen, the pastor, will preach in the morning, Rev. C. A. Barleigh of Champaign, in the afternoon, and Rev. Jessie Wood of Springfield, at night.

Master Frankie Jones, the handsome young actor, is a great masher, apparently without intending to be, either. Almost a dozen Decatur young ladies, between the ages of 14 and 17, called on him yesterday afternoon in the parlors of the Denning, and he entertained them all with a manner that fixed more firmly the array of Cupid that had already lodged in their hearts.

The family of Pete Mackey is not so bad off as it was, because the Charity union has done all that was necessary for the present. Pete Mackey himself works when he can get away from home, but his family is sick so much that he has to stay with them. The mother and four children are sick now, and they are as wretched as it is possible for any one to be and live.

"Say, Mollie," said a young man of this city yesterday to his best girl who is queen of the kitchen in a West Main street house, "I noticed lights burning at your house pretty late; was there a source out there last night?" "Sore eye is it?" said Mollie.

"Divil a one of me knows about the sore eye but because me and you and that, pe of a jude standing under, Larry, there is a divil of a sore head in the house this morning. It is the boss that is wearing it, and the mistress wid the help of a cooquel market is responsible for it. It's a job it will be before he comes home drunk again, I am thinking."

Didn't Entertain this Angel, Unaware.

S. B. Turner, editor of The State Capital, the colored republican paper of Springfield, came over to Decatur the other day to look over the political situation, visit old friends, etc. Major W. H. Bramble discovered him, took him to his Spring Avenue mansion and entertained him royally. He was toasted and feted and driven around and one was taken to prevent the accident of Mr. Turner's meeting any person inimical to the major and his aspirations, although the major could disclaim all responsibility should any accident of the kind occur.

Congressman Rowell is doing the republican great injustice by permitting Jack to hold on under such circumstances. There are a score or more good, staunch republicans in that city who could fill the office more acceptably than the present incumbent. There is one applicant, however, in the person of W. H. Bramble, who in our judgment, should be honored with the position. He has been an active, consistent and influential republican, and his endorsement of the business men and party managers of Macon county. He is the unanimous choice of the Irish republican club, of the Afro-American club of over 250 members, and in fact of all republican organizations in the city. In the face of these strong endorsements we see no reason why the appointment should be withheld.

Here is at least one man in the republican ranks who is willing to let the "Irish apply" for an office for him and will not snub them, or ridicule their religion, or poke fun at their language, or say anything about an Irishman having hair on his teeth, or an accent on his tongue, or could get up into overalls--until after he gets the office--anyway.

Dust to Dust.

The remains of A. A. Shannon, accompanied by a large number of relatives and friends arrived in the city yesterday from Bement and were taken to St. Patrick's church, where the funeral services were conducted by Rev. P. J. Mackin. The interment was made in the Catholic cemetery.

A Quantal Swine.

Orta O. Crane, one of THE REVIEW'S carriers, while out hunting yesterday afternoon, in company with Art Kaylor, was attacked by a large dog hog, who used his mouth very effectually and bit so severely that he will be laid up for some time. The dog porker will probably recover.

A WOMAN'S BUILDING.

A Handsome Structure to Be Built and Occupied by Women.

Decatur has a great many things to be proud of, but when the new Woman's club building is finished, it will have nothing to show with more pride than that. The plans, made by W. W. Bolington, of Chicago, came yesterday, and were shown at a meeting of the directors of the stock company. The first exclamation of each lady was "O how lovely," "Perfect!" "Hand some!" "Nothing like it!" followed quickly, and every one in looking at the plans agreed that the exclamations were justified.

The plans are for a handsome building, one unlike anything in Decatur. The two fronts, on South Park and Franklin streets, are richly ornamented from top to bottom, with many unique designs. Practically the building is five stories high, as the basement and attic are both constructed for use and will be rented. The slate roof is pitched at a sharp angle. Large bay windows are on the front and side. They are surmounted by gables in the sharply pitched slate roof. On the side, or rather, on the "Franklin street front," as the ladies insist on saying, the words "Woman's Club" in large stone letters, will be placed between the second and third floor windows. The building is to be constructed of brick, arranged in many curious ways, Bedford limestone of a cream color, and iron. The cost will be inside of $10,000.

This is to be distinctively a woman's building. It was conceived by women, will be paid for by women, and occupied almost entirely by women. All but one floor is rented now, and all the tenants so far are women.

The basement is rented to the Woman's exchange. There are a store room, dining room, kitchen and pantry, with a small office at the back for the charity association. The boiler of the steam heating plant will be under the sidewalk.

The first floor is to be finished for a handsome business room. It is a short distance above the sidewalk, has large windows on front and side, and will be a good place for almost any business. It is the only room not rented.

The second floor will be leased to Mrs. Dr. Grimes.

It is the third floor that claims the interest of the ladies. There the Woman's club will have its home, and an elegant home it will be. An elevator at the back of the building will make it easily accessible. The main room is 50 feet long from the front. At the south end will be a raised platform. At the other end is a room for directory meetings that can be thrown into the main hall by folding doors. Besides being just the place for club meetings, these rooms will be most useful for receptions, lectures, afternoon teas, or any other gathering of the women of Decatur. The meeting of the association here next year will furnish half a dozen opportunities for using this delightful home.

Three rooms with sky lights will be made in the high roof. One of them, with north windows, has been rented to Miss Laura Johns, and she will have her studio there. At the directory meeting yesterday it was resolved to go to work immediately, and a building committee composed of Miss Wilcox, Mrs. James Laworth, Mrs. J. N. Randall, Mrs. C. P. Thatcher, and Miss Roby was appointed. McNabb & Sons are the builders, and they will receive bids for the work Monday. It is hoped that the corner stone may be laid by June 6, which is the end of the club year. The building will be occupied before the winter.

The Nuptial Knot.

Judge Nelson is fast climbing the ladder of fame as an adept in the matter of tying matrimonial knots, and he throws so much solemnity into the matter that a fellow is really ready to take a solemn oath that he will never commit the offense again. Yesterday he conferred supreme happiness on William H. Snook, of Olney, and Miss Silbille Jane Jay, of Bement, by uniting them in marriage and by good and undoubtedly sincere wishes for their happiness. Silbille Jane Jay shook with happiness after sentence was pronounced, and William Henry appeared pleased enough to promise to always get up and light the fires.

Justice W. L. Hammer is another of Cupid's favorite lieutenants, and joins the simple formula of the law with the established ritual of the Methodist church and with enough Masonic mysticism to cause the teeth of the guilty parties to rattle in their sockets. Yesterday George Richter and Miss Minnie Lawrence, of Urbana, appeared before his Honor, and he speedily made them happy by marrying them, giving them his blessing and bidding them go in peace.

Accidental Shooting.

William, the 18 year old son of Robert Elder, of Niantic, was accidentally shot yesterday. A loaded revolver lying on the counter of his father's store was accidentally shoved off onto the floor, the hammer striking first and discharging the weapon. The ball struck the young man on the right elbow, and glancing upward ploughed itself through the flesh of the arm to the shoulder. Father and son came to this city and Dr. Walston removed the bullet and pronounced the patient not seriously injured.

The $2 cabinet photographs made at the East End gallery seems to be giving very general satisfaction.
